SCENTS OF THE SEASON

Posted: 3rd November 2015

As we start to unravel our favourite winter scarves and replace summer colognes with the rich, deep scents that signify falling leaves and heavy winter skies guest contributor Sarah McCubbin, Fragrance Expert and Founder of pebble&co, shares her insider favourite fragrances for the winter season.

Tubéreuse Eau De Parfum, £125 | Le Galion

Tubéreuse by Le Galion is a delicate yet full-bodied scent – a refined and polished floral with rich, creamy tones and an uplifting crisp and green top note that cuts through and lightens the bold blooming accords. This is a head-turning fragrance, light enough for everyday and perfect for cool autumnal days.

Rose Noir, £130 | Byredo

For those dark and wintery moments, I love Byredo's Rose Noir. A romantic and seductive floral that is opulent and sultry without being flashy or ostentatious; it's earthy moss and rock rose notes give it a sumptuous grittiness which is steadied and elevated by the freshness of freesia and grapefruit - the ultimate black cashmere overcoat of my fragrance library. (Warning: This is a great fave of the boys and I'm now having to share Rose Noir with my husband.)

One Evening Body Splash, £75 | Bamford

Another shared favourite for autumn in my household is Bamford's One Evening. Not for the faint-hearted, this generous splash that pebble&co created with Carole Bamford, brings to life a rich blend of vetiver, cedar charcoal and oak moss; a sophisticated statement fragrance that stands out from the crowd.

Leather, price upon request | Perfumer H

For those days when you're seeking a robust, yet easy wearing scent, Leather by Perfumer H is a satisfying and comforting combination of fresh bergamot and lavender, anchored with iris, birch tar and cedar and a solid dose of worn leather – like an oversized woollen roll-neck you can't be without for long winter walks and snuggling by the fire, all wrapped up into a fragrant cohort.

Black Orchid Eau de Parfum, £53 | TOM FORD

A bit like your favourite jeans, a scent that never goes out of fashion will be Tom Ford's Black Orchid – an intoxicating explosion of jasmine, gardenia and the plumpest blackcurrants, smoothed over and deepened with vetiver, sandalwood, patchouli and just a hint of chocolate. Good enough to eat...let alone wear.

Monocle Scent One: Hinoki Eau de Toilette, 50ml, £75 | Comme de Garçons

Monocle's first fragrance Hinoki by Commes des Garçons has a watery freshness of cypress, pine, sharpened by oiled cedar and softened with damp moss and vetiver – the perfect fragrance after exercise or the gym or a relaxed Saturday morning – an easy-wearing staple.
